

Inter-relatedness

We acknowledge the inter-relatedness of the economic, environmental, cultural, and institutional realms of our community life as we continue to plan and build our communities in a manner that enables us to achieve mutually beneficial results.

Rights

We respect the rights of others in the often complex process of developing our communities: property rights, including those associated with Indian lands; the right to dissent; and freedom from infringement on constitutional rights as citizens and as fellow humans seeking their rightful place in society.

Responsibilities

We affirm that, concurrent with rights, lie significant individual responsibilities to our communities and to each other in pursuing our personal priorities along with others engaged in community building.

Risks

We readily acknowledge that there is a certain degree of risk and uncertainty regarding future expectations, especially as they relate to land resources and how we manage them. At the same time, through the unique planning opportunities present here, we seek to make the risks known and avoid arbitrary and capricious decision making that aggravates the normal risks in human affairs.

Diversity

We respect the diversity of our peoples, with their fundamental and common beliefs and convictions. Accordingly, we cherish their rights to live their lives without unnecessary governmental regulation. At the same time, we acknowledge that the diversity we value so much requires leadership and tradeoffs in balancing the interests involved in a community development decision.

Valued Contributions

We value the contributions to our communities on the part of many sectors of our population whose age, youth, disability, health, or other characteristics may limit their contributions and satisfaction as community members unless they have equal access and are assured opportunities to be full members of our communities.

Varied Communities

We value the contribution to our overall quality of life by the richly varied municipalities, Indian nations, unincorporated communities, and rural communities in Riverside County.
